On Tuesday, district judge Phillip Priest, of the ACT's supreme court, ruled that trans-identified inmate Gavan Garcia should be moved from a women's prison to the ACT's main jail, where male prisoners would make more comfortable. Garcia, who was born a man but identifies as a woman, has already undergone gender reassignment surgery and been given hormone treatment. She has also applied to have a new birth certificate issued. Garcia's case is one of the largest of its kind, and was supported by Australian National University law professor Lucinda Wallenstein, who said it was the first known case in Australia where a prisoner's right to access gender-affirming treatment has been upheld in court. In Garcia's case, Priest ruled that the dangerous and disruptive behaviour that followed the decision by officials to refuse to allow her to be housed in a women's jail was a "real and genuine threat" to the community. In response to Garcia's struggle to transition in the women's prison, Judge Priest said that there had been "regular" physical altercations and fights at the women's prison and Garcia had been "
