I need to use a string to determine if it has more than 10 characters. The string might have only 1 character. I cannot use c++ libraries. I can use the following, but it always returns 0. int myLength = strlen(myString); A: You have a mix of C and C++ code. C++ is the correct way to do it. As you've tagged your question with c++, here is a good link to help you with that. Here is a C solution that should work for you: int myLength = strlen(myString); if (myLength > 10) { // You have more than 10 characters } A: #include using namespace std; int main() { string myString("I am a string"); int myLength = myString.length(); if (myLength > 10) { // You have more than 10 characters } } Prediction of resting metabolic rate in postmenopausal women by the Lean body mass (LBM) and fat mass (FM) equations: implications for metabolic studies.
