Q: C#, @attribute JsonProperty with var is not working I have a class : public class Listener : Identifier { [JsonProperty("id")] public string Id { get; set; } [JsonProperty("text")] public string Text { get; set; } } and a json "id": 1, "text": "bla bla" but for some reason when the json.stringify is called, i get a null value for both ID and Text Also, if i change the code from the above to : [JsonProperty("id", defaultValue = "id")] Then the initial json is ok, but when i then add another item with the same name with a new value, the last one is used, the one that was added after the declaration. Any idea? A: In fact my problem was related to NSubstitute tests, using the classes generated by NSubstitute i had the same problem because it's a copy/pasted class and the field had the same name (not necessarily "id"). So to solve it, i had to comment out the attribute : public class Listener : IIdentifier { [JsonProperty("id", defaultValue = "id")] public string Id { get; set; } [JsonProperty("text")] public string Text { get; set; } } in order to be like : [JsonProperty("id")] public string Id { get; set; } public class Listener : IIdentifier { [JsonProperty("text")] public string Text { get; set; } }
