Ms Office 2003 Mui Incl Sp3 Thai 1054.exe This White Paper is for informational purposes only. MICROSOFT MAKES NO WARRANTIES, EXPRESS, IMPLIED OR STATUTORY, AS TO THE INFORMATION IN THIS DOCUMENT. This document describes the Microsoft Office 2003 Interface Manager (Ms Office 2003 IAM) in terms of applications, SDKs, components, data types, and messages. It also describes the types of MS Office 2003 IAM components for the Microsoft Office suite and certain components that are available on the Internet. In this document, an application is an application component that is associated with one or more of the elements described in this document. An application may be an office component, such as Microsoft Access 2003, or a non-office application, such as Mydex, Inc., FortuneMagic, CloudSourceSoft, or IntelliOptimizer. Note that other Microsoft Office document management components, such as Word 2003 Word Automation Service (WAS) and macros are excluded from this definition as they are controlled via the Office System control panel. A component is a software entity that has a life cycle. There are three types of components that are associated with office applications: components of the Office System, components of the Office system and components that run in an office process. Components that are part of the Office System are shown as . A data type is a type that is used in an Office application. Not all data types are Office components. For example, text fields, hyperlinks, and icons are not office components. To access data types in an Office component, the end user must use the appropriate method. The SDK contains the current specification for all data types. However, the delivery of all data types is under development. A message is the result of a
