Q: How to pass a list from mongo to flask in json response I am writing a route for a flask application using flask_mongoengine. I want to return json, but I need to return a list. here is my route: @app.route('/find_accounts', methods=['GET', 'POST']) def find_accounts(): db.collection.find(query) # print(result) return jsonify(result) and my json response should be something like this: ["accounts": [{ "name": "John Doe", "age": 20, "date_joined": "2012-10-10T16:34:45.410Z", "email": "jd@gmail.com" }, { "name": "Kelvin Doe", "age": 20, "date_joined": "2012-10-10T16:34:45.410Z", "email": "kel@gmail.com" }]] A: Return a dict and build the list in the view function: from mongoengine import * import json #... @app.route('/find_accounts', methods=['GET', 'POST']) def find_accounts(): results = Account.objects(query) return {'accounts': results} You will still need to convert the results to a list in the Flask view function. There are a few approaches: Use a list comprehension in the view function that adds the documents one by one. import json from mongoengine import * from flask_mongoengine import MongoEngine #... @app.route('/find_accounts', methods=['GET', 'POST']) def find_accounts(): # Build list of result documents list_results = []

The 33rd Presidency As soon as George W. Bush becomes the 41st President of the United States, the next question is: what are his priorities? As people begin to play political "what if" games, we should not underestimate how difficult the next four years are going to be for him. This period will be every bit as tumultuous as that of the Clinton presidency. While the effects of the 2000 election will be with us for a long time to come, the immediate repercussions of the 2004 election will be felt within weeks. The Obama presidency will also be very difficult. The millions who came to see W emerge as the next president and say "I-M-V-O" will not be so easy to convert to the "Obama candidacy." His appeal in the Rust Belt states will be even more difficult. He will also have to overcome the far left wing of the Democratic Party, which will use his association with Bill and Hillary Clinton to create more anti-Barack hysteria, asking the "what was he doing with my husband?" question. When it comes to politics, it is not a coincidence that Bush's father ran to the right of Reagan and the Reagan's father was to the right of his brother (the last President Johnson). It is also important to understand that the real differences between Bush and Obama are much more fundamental than who is the "liberal" on gun control, Social Security, the Wall Street bail-outs, regulations on the financial sector, the Patriot Act and so on. In every case, it is important to remember that for Bush it will be a question of what policies the U.S. can afford. The policies that are right for the country are those that help the economy recover and America's military position in the world. Bush will be more likely to accept a package of liberal policies than Obama. The problem that he will face is that such packages will encounter serious resistance from traditional conservatives, the people who are on the way to becoming a mainstream of American politics, while they are certain to be enthusiastically accepted by the far left. The other problem is the conundrum that any package of liberal policies will always face, the polarization of the country. The polarization of the country has been going on for more than 40 years, and this election is part of it. During the first two decades of the Cold War,
