Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus and method for providing a desirable low temperature pour after an invert furnace has been shut down. 2. Description of Related Art In the recent past, the production of aluminum from bauxite ore was mainly limited to the Hall-Heroult process. In the Hall-Heroult process, aluminum metal is produced from aluminum oxide by the electrolysis of molten "alumina" (Al₂O₃), a naturally occurring aluminum-containing ore. The Hall-Heroult process has several problems. One problem is the electrolyte (molten aluminum oxide) is cooled and solidified in the bottom of the process cell. To maintain the fluidity of the electrolyte, the process requires that the entire cell be heated. This heating of the electrolyte causes alumina dissociation and formation of impurities. Another problem associated with the process is the maintenance of superheat in the electrolyte by filling the electrolyte with carbon dioxide, which lowers the electrolyte temperature and inhibits the alumina dissociation process. Another problem is that the carbon that is used to maintain superheat creates an off gas. An off gas contains contaminants and carbon-dioxide (CO₂). The off gas must be processed to eliminate the contaminants. Another problem is that the process requires the use

At the end of a bad decade for the major Canadian banks, there's at least one small and growing bank that's beginning to move in the right direction: Dundee. Here in New Scotland, people who want to open a bank account or are thinking about doing so can find the friendly, professional help they need at the local branch of Dundee Bank. Part of a family of Ontario-based financial institutions, Dundee is unusual for Canada in that it's owned by one of the big five of the country's banks. That means it's not a public institution, although, once Canadians find it, they can access the same services that are available everywhere else. It has one advantage over all of the others: the service is free. Whether the big banks make their own versions of an inter-bank payment system (VIA's), or use a third-party bank such as Interac or popular in-store payment terminals, it can be costly to set up, operate and maintain. And that cost often translates to higher costs for banking services. For some customers, though, a whole new set of obstacles can arise. A customer who doesn't understand how the system works and doesn't pay attention to the timetable when making a payment can get stuck. And though these banks do offer a range of services, from free checking accounts to online bill pay and other value-added products, there is no guarantee that a customer will use them. In the wake of the worst decade for Canadian banking, it seems fitting that people in New Scotland would find a home for their banking needs in Dundee. And that's just the beginning.
