She has released several singles as a solo artist and as part of the pop duo Brisas. In 2004, she won the Latin Grammy Awards for Best Spanish Language Female Pop Vocal Performance.

Early life She started singing when she was a child, but she got serious later. When she was 15 years old she moved to Madrid, and began to study Physics and Astrophysics at the University Complutense. She also studied a master's degree in Business Administration at the EBA. Solo career After she finished her studies she began to sing to her friends. She was a hostess at a bar of the city. In 1997 she recorded her first single, entitled This is my girl. It was written by the composer Efrén Querejeta and produced by José María Paz Pardo. The song received great attention, and it was played on several radios and on television channels. In 2000 she recorded the song Amore was covered by the singer Diego Arancibia in the album El camino. The song was a big hit in Spain. That year she released her second single, titled El que piensa fuego (lit. He who thinks fire). In 2003 she began recording the album Fábula de cuentos, released in 2004. The song of the album, Te conté la verdad fue principal, was released in September 2004. The song was a big hit. In this single she won two Latin Grammy Awards. In September 2005 she released her second album Alma de mármol. Brisas In 2006, she began a relationship with the singer Antonio Vega, a Spaniard of Sicilian origin. They decided to collaborate on music and they formed a duo called Brisas. The first single was released in October 2006. The single was a success. In 2008 they released the single No sé nada más (lit. I don't know anything more).

According to the £32 million Hyperion House arson attack that took place on 1 August 2016 in Amesbury, Wiltshire, the perpetrator gained access to the house by picking the lock on the back door with a screwdriver. A witness heard screaming in the house and ran towards the sound which was captured on the fire alarm which activated. Police are now looking at CCTV footage of the burglary which is thought to have taken place between midnight and 3am. A police spokesman said: "The suspect gained access into the property through the back door of the house. "This was achieved either through picking the lock or breaking the lock with a screwdriver. "Police are appealing for information from the public following this incident." Anyone with information is asked to contact Wiltshire Police on 101 quoting crime reference 36/801839741. The property was completely destroyed, along with computers and equipment inside. A crime scene including the charred remains of the property was yesterday removed from the scene which has been cordoned off as a forensic investigation continues. The witness said there was no sign that anyone had been inside the house before the fire started and there were no immediate reports of any nearby alarms being activated. She added: "I heard people screaming in the back of the house. "I went to the back of the house and seen a lady. "She said: 'Call the police. A fire has just started.'" She added: "I was just in shock. There were about six or seven people at the house." A Met Police spokesperson said: "The Met is investigating a report of a house fire in Amesbury. "Officers from the major crime fire and investigation team are leading the inquiry. No arrests have been made." The house is believed to be an extended family home, and there are thought to be around a dozen people living there. Smoke could be seen billowing from the house before it was put out by the fire service. Around 60 firefighters worked throughout the night to 648931e174

The decline of ovarian activity after the onset of menopause is a natural physiological event, accompanied by a decline in estrogen production, but causing a decline in lean body mass, occurring even in healthy women. To maintain the health of the female organism, to resist the aging process, and to maintain the quality of life, changes in body weight and composition must be avoided. Since changes in body weight, composition, and metabolism are related to the secretion of the so-called "anabolic hormones" or growth hormone and insulin-like growth factor, it is not surprising that the anabolic hormones are proposed as treatments to replace the declining production of estrogens, which may contribute to these physiological changes. Of the three anabolic hormones (growth hormone, insulin-like growth factor, and the catabolic hormone cortisol) tested to date, only growth hormone is reported to increase the release of estrogens. However, the effects of growth hormone on estrogens are so small that it is not clear whether they will be of clinical importance in the treatment of postmenopausal symptoms and prevention of osteoporosis.Percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty: assessment and complications. Percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty was performed in 255 consecutive patients. Coronary lesions were in the left anterior descending coronary artery in 60, the left circumflex coronary artery in 62, and the right coronary artery in 203. The primary success rate was 98% and the secondary success rate was 99%. Two hundred and eighty-two procedures (64% of the patients) were performed with intravenous nitroglycerin. Additional diagnostic procedures were performed in all patients. No major complication occurred in 23% of the patients, including 3% who died from cardiac causes. The major complication rate was 15% and included death in 2%, emergency bypass surgery in 11%, and surgical conversion in 2%.
