I've been playing it for a few days and, to be fair, I've got to admit that I really like it! And I love the game's visual style. This invention relates to the field of engraving. Various approaches have been taken in the art to produce plastic articles with engravings of relief from cast and molded articles or to engrave a plurality of pits or grooves of specified configuration. One approach has been to use lithographic processes to form a mask from a layer of nonreactive material on the article being engraved. The article is then etched through the lithographic mask to form the desired engraved relief or pattern. In the field of fabricating decorative articles such as decorative slabs, laminated wood and the like from polyvinyl chloride (PVC), engraving has been employed to establish a pleasing decorative pattern or design by providing a plurality of grooves or indentations of specified configuration. Other methods of forming the decorative pattern have included casting in a mold of an appropriate plastic material such as plasticized PVC. Such methods have the disadvantages of utilizing a considerable amount of raw material, including molded plastics and other materials, to produce the article, and suffer from limitations in the type of decorative patterns which can be created. While other approaches to engraving have been used to create decorative surface relief patterns, they all suffer from limitations. Thermoforming offers the potential of providing a relatively inexpensive method of creating decorative patterns on a number of materials. Even with use of a mold, the ability to create designs of particular geometric configuration is limited. A number of methods have been employed to engrave plastic materials which either use a mold to create a negative shape and force the material to flow around the molding or negative or otherwise force the plastic to flow around the negative shape. My previous application Ser. No. 432,073 describes an engraving method that produces a pattern of a certain geometric configuration by using a hot-embossing technique where the article to be engraved is first heated and then pressed into a
