Code-switching tends to occur when the topics change and the speaker adds some sentences of another language in the speech to express the meaning of the original sentences. The purpose is to achieve the meaning of the original speaking. There are three main categories of code-switching in the verbal context: intrasentential, intersentential and extra-sentential code-switching. Inter-sentential code-switching occur only within one clause (Chaer and Agustina, 2010). Intra-sentential code-switching are the internal clauses which is part of the main discourse (Chaer and Agustina, 2010). Extra-sentential code-switching is the sentences that are not part of the main discourse. The theories of Poplack and Hoffman are used in this research. The data were downloaded from Youtube, two videos were chosen and then the writer made the transcription. To conduct the data, the writer did library research, collected data from a book and some other gathered from the internet. As a result, the writer found 62 data contain three types of code-switching appear in this talk show: 41 data are intra-sentential, 12 data are inter-sentential and 9 data are extra-sentential. This research also shows the characteristics among those types to distinguish it. Besides, the writer also found the reasons which influence the user in doing code- switching there are: 30 data are talking about particular topic, 1 data is quoting somebody else, 5 data are being emphatic about something, 9 data are interjection, 3 data are repetition used for clarification, 5 data are intention of clarifying the speech content for the interlocutor, and 9 data are expressing group identity. 5ec8ef588b
